

Dear FCC,

I am concerned about the possibility that AIR-1 might be pushed off the air waves in my Lexington, Kentucky, area broadcast on FM-95.3. Please don't let a new LPFM station over-ride the FM translator already in use by AIR-1.

Even though it is a national broadcast station, it is unique in providing a positive message with NO POLITICAL overtones. This is a refreshing escape from the rest of the stations available locally. They also provide information on Christian event in the local area, such as the Wilmore festival and various special local church events. This is important information to many of us, and we wouldn't hear about it without them.

In short, they provide an uplifting positive message that people need in the stressful pace of their daily lives. It is in the public interest that a place of peace be available on the radio. This is true of both AIR-1, which is a rockin' station, and K-LOVE, which is more mellow, but both provide a sense of calm acceptance in a turbulent world.

Thank you for listening,
Susan Mallette
